ABOUT US

Sasaletu as the training institution had previously worked with government departments facilitating trainings for various NPOs. Our strength on this subject therefore is our experience. Through the course/training evaluations our company usually conduct after each training, participants showed that it would be convenient to formulate language-sensitive and detailed manual for long-term usage and we have found this to be true for the training of Occupational Health and Safety.

Sasaletu has a pool of employees who are intensely equipped both in the experience and scientific knowledge in the field of Occupational Health and Safety and training, which makes us more than capable as far as capacity is concerned.

We offer our services to formulate; train; and evaluate the improvements on (not limited to) the following subjects:

- Occupational Health and Safety
- Conflict Management
- Financial Management
- Assets Management and
- Resource Mobilisation Strategies and Skills

We have the proven record of experience of facilitating the above trainings within public and private entities, NPOs and Faith-based Organisations within South Africa.

Our trained facilitators have gathered enough data on the field to contextualize the theoretical information with the realities in our society. It will be much simple to then create the informed manual that will speak not only to the existing experiences of businesses but also be culturally sensitive in their approach. This is what we, as Sasaletu, specialise in.

TRAINING PRINCIPLES

The value of our training rests in the principles we instill in our facilitators. Professional work ethic, a keen sense of disseminating information in a way that is well received and absorbed and a willingness to keep abreast of the latest regarding Occupational Health and Safety, is what sets our facilitators apart. We focus on operating as a collective to ensure consistency, quality and tailored service. Our core principle is ensuring that we don't only share information but impart it in the individuals we train as we understand that their very lives depend on it. The Sasalethu promise is that of knowledge in practice.

"We focus on operating as a collective to ensure consistency, quality and tailored service."
